				leave the safety of the counter to "engage" with customers and tidy up even though they are alone in the shop increasing the risk to themselves. Promotions are targeted at the younger customers (over 18) and machine competitions where customers play machines for free often result in the winning customer falling into addiction. Well managed betting shops are not a major problem except for robberies. The problems arise when new staff are quickly handed the keys to s shop and told they are managing, disputes arise and staff can be bullied via verbal and physical abuse. Often a weak manager attracts youths to gather many under aged outside shops as their older mates gamble inside. Difficult for staff as although vigilant asking for ID's these can be faked and staff are not trained in detecting these.

57				This is almost shutting the stable door after the horse has bolted. The council have allowed many bookmakers to open at the expense of other shops. For instance, the well loved Sandwich Box in Barking shut down because the council put their rates up, to be replaced by a Paddy Power. Maybe the council should actually help revive Barking (and DAGENHAM the forgotten relative) by helping other shops to remain or open. It's not just there's lots of bookies - there's loads of fried chicken shops, pawn shops, charity shops etc... Actually regenerate Barking & Dagenham town centres by getting some decent stores in. 				society. As gambling is not something that can be totally repressed (illegal gambling will just rise) it must be smartly regulated and who offer the service must be properly formed (from the owner to the employee) about the risk associated so that they can identify potential victims and report back to the public services that should provide assistance.
91				Why is their an issue with having too many betting shops in deprived areas as compared to affluent parts of the city. Eg. Look at Wansted High Street and compare that with Barking Town Centre and also East Ham Town Centre, both these later areas are in poor areas, where you have people with not much money and you tempt them in with Gambling, something is seriously wrong here. Also they attract the wrong kind of people into the area, this can be backed up by police reports and incidents they attend in and around such businesses. People tend to hang around these shops, as well as being an area where I have seen drugs being openly dealt. Dealers using these shops as cover for their crimes.	20/07/17 14:24	0.1	Submitted	web
